

The system allows administrators to manage user permissions, granting them access to different resources within the application. The administrator can assign permissions, revoke them, and view the current permissions assigned to users. The system also includes a mechanism to validate these permissions before granting access to a resource.